EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Over 1.3 million Americans call a nursing facility home.¹ Despite early warning signs and overwhelming evidence that the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) would have a devastating impact on residents and nursing home workers, the Trump Administration failed to execute a coordinated strategy to adequately prepare and respond to the pandemic. As a result, the older adults and people with disabilities who live in nursing homes and the workers who care for them are among those most affected by COVID-19.² To date, of the more than 125,500 Americans who have lost their lives due to COVID-19, more than 54,000 have been residents and workers in nursing homes and other long-term care settings. This represents more than 40 percent of all deaths nationwide.³

On February 29, 2020, the first known COVID-19 outbreak in the United States occurred at a nursing home in Kirkland, Washington, taking the lives of at least 37 individuals.⁴ This outbreak should have served as an urgent warning to the Trump Administration that a coordinated, national response would be required to prevent the spread of the virus in congregate living settings. Tragically, this and other early warnings went unheeded. With insufficient access to diagnostic testing, missteps in procurement and distribution of personal protective equipment (PPE), and other failures in planning and execution detailed below, the Trump Administration's deeply flawed pandemic response resulted in unnecessary deaths and forced nursing homes into lockdowns nationwide.⁵ Today, seniors and people with disabilities living in nursing homes remain sequestered, scared and alone.⁶ And, overworked and underpaid nursing home workers continue to face life-and-death decisions without adequate protections and supplies.⁷

This report details how the Trump Administration's deregulatory agenda, repeated failures to adequately prepare for the COVID-19 pandemic, and its delayed and disorganized response exacerbated, and in some instances contributed to, a worsening public health crisis that has disproportionately affected the most vulnerable populations in the United States. The report also provides recommendations to address this crisis and prevent these failings in the future.

FINDINGS

Lack of Timely and Complete COVID-19 Case and Death Data for Nursing Homes

- For over four months, the Trump Administration did not track cases of COVID-19 or deaths caused by the virus in nursing homes.

The Trump Administration did not track the number of cases and deaths in nursing homes until more than 100 days after COVID-19 positive cases were identified in the United States. This nursing home data first started to be collected four months after the Trump Administration received official notification of COVID-19 from China, and more than two months after the first COVID-19 outbreak in a nursing home.

- The Trump Administration does not plan to count every COVID-19 case or death in nursing homes and has yet to collect urgently needed demographic information. Residents and workers in nursing homes and other long-term care settings account for over 40 percent of COVID-19 related deaths in the United States to date.⁸ However, the Trump Administration will not require the collection and reporting of data on the thousands of lives lost in nursing homes prior to May 1, 2020. Similarly, the Trump Administration declined to collect or report critical demographic information about residents and workers who have died or been infected by COVID-19 in a nursing home.
- The Trump Administration has not provided timely or accessible data to the public. Neither the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) nor the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) collected information about the spread of COVID-19 in nursing homes until May 17, 2020. The Trump Administration is not making that information available to the public in a timely manner, ensuring that the data is accurate, or making the information easily accessible for residents, workers, and families.

Delayed Support and Limited Resources for Nursing Homes

- The Trump Administration failed to implement a cohesive plan to ensure a steady supply of PPE to frontline workers across the United States, including workers at nursing homes. The Administration did not fully utilize the Defense Production Act (DPA) or leverage the Federal Emergency Management Agency's (FEMA) response capabilities to target medical equipment and supplies to needed populations. Nursing homes were left with limited options for obtaining crucial protective equipment.

- Nursing homes received inadequate supplies and assistance securing protective equipment from the federal government. On April 30, 2020, two months after the first COVID-19 outbreak in a nursing home, the Trump Administration announced FEMA would begin to coordinate PPE supply shipments to individual nursing homes. This initiative did not meet the needs of nursing homes facing serious PPE shortages, involved unnecessary delays, included faulty and unusable PPE, and did not contain equipment critical to caring for COVID-19 positive patients. Further, based on available information, FEMA did not include all eligible nursing homes in initial distribution lists.
- FEMA did not use a standardized data set regarding COVID-19 cases or deaths in nursing homes to guide shipments of supplies. FEMA did not target shipments of PPE to facilities based on complete data about the spread of COVID-19 in nursing homes. Instead, FEMA adopted an unknown methodology to determine “hotspots” and initiated a one-size-fits-all method for distributing PPE and determining how much PPE each facility should receive.
- The Trump Administration prioritized nursing homes too late and distributed too little of the emergency funding provided by Congress to those facilities. In March and April 2020, Congress allocated $100 billion in emergency funding in the CARES Act and an additional $75 billion in the Paycheck Protection Program and Health Care Enhancement Act for health care providers on the front lines of the pandemic. It took until May 22, 2020, for the Trump Administration to provide $4.9 billion to Medicare-certified nursing homes and until June 9, 2020 to provide $15 billion to non-Medicare enrolled, Medicaid-only providers that did not receive distributions in the first or second rounds of general fund allocations.

No National Testing Strategy

- The Trump Administration recommended regular testing of nursing home residents without providing a plan or the resources required to implement this recommendation. The Trump Administration recommended increased testing in nursing homes, but it did not address how facilities should procure additional tests or how the federal government would help facilities increase testing capacity.

Late and Lacking Oversight

- The Trump Administration delayed funding and detailed guidance for States on new oversight measures. It took weeks for the Trump Administration to provide detailed guidance on how to conduct new oversight measures and over a month for the Trump Administration to begin to disseminate much needed funding to conduct infection control inspections in nursing homes.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Urgent action is needed to address the tragedy that continues to unfold in nursing homes. As COVID-19 spreads throughout the United States, the following steps must be taken immediately to save the lives of nursing home residents and the workers who care for them:

- Ensure adequate data collection. Reporting of cases and deaths, as well as the availability of supplies (including PPE, testing, staffing and more) is essential to the promotion of a targeted response and the dissemination of vital resources. As demonstrated by early analyses, this reporting must include detailed demographic information, especially on race and ethnicity.
- Support States and nursing homes. Congress should provide adequate funding for States and nursing homes to help slow the spread of the virus and save lives.
- Provide urgently needed PPE and testing. To combat COVID-19 in nursing homes, workers require sufficient PPE and facilities need access to testing. The provision of these essential supplies requires adequate funding.
- Invest in home and community-based services. A thoughtful strategy to protect nursing home residents and workers must include a meaningful investment in Medicaid to expand access to long-term services and supports in the home and community.
- Facilitate promising strategies. As States engage in various phases of reopening, States should facilitate, and nursing homes should implement, promising strategies, including “cohorting” or separating residents based on COVID-19 status, sending in “surge” teams to address workforce shortages, and providing nursing homes with technical assistance on infection control practices.
- Elevate the workforce. Keeping workers safe with sufficient PPE, providing them with adequate pay, and ensuring they receive essential benefits is fundamental to preventing the continued spread of COVID-19 in nursing homes. These heroes on the front lines should receive premium pay, paid sick and paid family and medical leave, access to child care, and temporary housing (should the need for quarantine arise).
- Support pandemic mitigation efforts. During and after the COVID-19 pandemic, FEMA must consider how to support mitigation efforts for health emergencies, such as pandemics, when managing grant programs for eligible facilities like nursing homes.
- Improve emergency management and infection control in nursing homes. CMS and FEMA, along with their state counterparts, should conduct a comprehensive review of emergency management and response programs, and how these programs interact with nursing homes, to better address need.

- Anticipate and mitigate need. As demonstrated by the current pandemic, our Nation's emergency management apparatus does not have the protocols in place or the capacity needed to quickly understand the effects of a disaster on a community, project its impacts, and model potential outcomes to best anticipate need. The federal government must demonstrate that it is using data-driven decision making for COVID-19 response.

BACKGROUND

Before the COVID-19 pandemic, the Trump Administration took steps to weaken protections for nursing home residents.

The Trump Administration's decision to pursue regulatory rollbacks and curtail oversight of nursing homes undermined the Nation's ability to adequately respond to the spread of COVID-19 in nursing homes long before the pandemic. From 2017 to 2019, the Trump Administration proposed several actions to weaken requirements related to infection control and preparedness as well as basic enforcement mechanisms that are now at the center of the pandemic and essential to combating the virus.

Infection Control. An estimated 1.6 to 3.8 million infections occur in nursing homes annually.⁹ According to a recent Government Accountability Office (GAO) report, 82 percent of nursing homes surveyed between 2013 and 2017 were cited for infection prevention and control deficiencies, and approximately half of those facilities were cited for similar problems across multiple years, indicating a lack of meaningful remedial action.¹⁰

In 2016, the Obama Administration finalized rules to address these concerns. Under the regulations, CMS required all nursing homes to develop "a system for preventing, identifying, reporting, investigating, and controlling infections and communicable diseases."¹¹ This rule was implemented in phases, beginning in November 2016. The final phase of that regulation, which was set to take effect in November 2019, also required nursing homes to employ a part-time infection "preventionist" with specialized training to maintain proper infection control protocols—a measure that researchers have found makes a quantifiable difference in nursing homes.¹²

Before the final provision of the rule could take effect, however, the Trump Administration took steps to weaken it. In July 2019, CMS announced a plan to eliminate the requirement for a part-time infection preventionist, instead requiring that specialists spend "sufficient time at the facility."¹³ These actions have been criticized as "dangerous," and a threat to "the mental and physical security of some of the most vulnerable residents."¹⁴ Additionally, actions by the Trump Administration in November 2019 delayed guidance on how to make sure nursing homes meet the requirement of having an infection preventionist. This means that while the regulations are technically in effect, they have been minimally enforced.¹⁵ Had the requirement been fully enforced, nursing homes may have been better resourced to prevent the spread of COVID-19.

Emergency Preparedness. Lessons from the devastation in 2005 from Hurricane Katrina and succeeding disasters highlighted the need for reforms and emergency preparedness protocols in nursing homes.¹⁶ After years of development, starting under President Bush, the Obama Administration put in place new emergency management regulations for nursing homes in 2016.¹⁷ These new rules required nursing homes to develop an emergency plan using an all-hazards approach, focusing on capacities and capabilities that are critical to preparedness.¹⁸

The rules encouraged closer inspections by nursing homes to ensure they met preparedness standards, including an annual review of emergency plans, policies and procedures, communication plans, and training and testing programs.¹⁹

Despite the efforts of many nursing homes to comply with these regulations, shortcomings in emergency preparedness persist. One year after the regulations went into effect, nearly 25 percent of nursing homes surveyed were cited for deficiencies, including failures to test emergency plans and implement adequate training.²⁰ Recent analysis of federal inspection records shows that “homes rarely face severe reprimands... even when inspectors identify repeated lapses” in emergency preparedness protocols, and that “[i]n some cases, nursing homes failed to prepare for basic contingencies.”²¹ It remains unclear if or how the Trump Administration corrected these failures, leaving many nursing homes poorly situated to guard against a pandemic.

Fines and Enforcement. In 2017, the Trump Administration took steps to ease civil money penalties (CMPs) for violations of safety regulations and other standards of care in nursing homes. In July 2017, CMS instructed Regional Offices to issue fewer daily fines for non-compliance, instead promoting per-instance fines.²² In October 2017, CMS raised the threshold of what instances of noncompliance would qualify for automatic fines, meaning penalties would not be issued unless a higher number of instances of noncompliance occurred.²³ A 2019 analysis of federal records found that the average fine for nursing home non-compliance dropped from $41,260 in 2016 under the Obama Administration to $28,405 during the Trump Administration.²⁴ In November 2017, CMS issued an 18-month moratorium on the enforcement of fines for non-compliance with certain measures in the 2016 Obama Administration rules, further restraining the effectiveness of these regulations in promoting safety in nursing homes.²⁵ These trends are exacerbated by the fact that enforcement actions for infection control deficiencies are rare. GAO recently found that 99 percent of infection prevention and control deficiencies were classified as not severe, and enforcement actions were only implemented in one percent of these cases.²⁶

The Spread of COVID-19 in Nursing Homes

The Trump Administration’s inadequate preparedness for and response to the COVID-19 pandemic, its deregulatory and enforcement shortcomings, and the already heightened risk associated with COVID-19 in congregate settings has contributed to and compounded the tragedies unfolding in nursing homes nationwide.

Residents in nursing homes sometimes live in the same room as others, typically dine together, participate in group activities, and receive care from the same workers. Further, most nursing home residents have multiple underlying health conditions or comorbidities, which increases the risk of becoming severely ill or dying from COVID-19. Additionally, early analyses have shown that nursing homes where there is a high proportion of residents and workers from racial and ethnic minority populations are more likely to experience COVID-19, reflecting broader national trends.²⁷

Despite growing alarm and persistent calls for help as the COVID-19 pandemic continues to spread throughout the United States, nursing home workers continue to engage in direct care of residents without the necessary PPE, like masks or gloves, risking the safety of both workers and individuals receiving care.²⁸ Nursing home workers are forced to reuse PPE, go without, or stop working altogether.²⁹ In some extreme cases, workers have outfitted themselves with gowns made of trash bags or face shields made of headbands and page protectors.³⁰

The lack of testing supplies and ability to receive tests in a timely manner has further plagued nursing homes and continues to undermine any efforts to limit the virus' spread.³¹ Insufficient access to testing has limited the ability of States and nursing homes to “cohort,” or appropriately separate those who have the virus from those who do not, as recommended by CMS and CDC, and limit workers' exposure.³² Lack of testing also prevents residents interested in moving (or families who wish to move their loved ones) home or to another setting from doing so until it is too late and has forced some States to move residents en masse.³³

In addition, the lack of a coordinated federal response on testing has stymied the ability to regularly and repeatedly test workers in nursing homes to prevent the spread of COVID-19. Guidance from federal agencies to nursing homes has been inconsistent, creating confusion for nursing homes regarding the appropriate action.³⁴ For example, CMS recommends that nursing homes test workers weekly, while CDC directs facilities to make assessments on testing frequency for workers based on the prevalence of COVID-19 in their area.³⁵ This incoherent federal strategy has put workers and residents in nursing homes at increased risk.

Shortages in testing and PPE, and the risks posed to workers, laid bare staffing issues fomenting in nursing homes for decades. In addition, many workers in the industry are underpaid, overburdened, and often do not have essential benefits, including paid sick leave and paid family and medical leave. Most often, these workers are low-income and from minority communities—factors tied to increased risk of complications or death from COVID-19.³⁶ Facing this pandemic, some nursing homes could not retain an adequate workforce to care for residents, as workers were exposed to COVID-19 and could not come into work, or were forced to stay home to care for family members and children.³⁷ In at least one extreme case, a nursing home evacuated residents to other facilities.³⁸ Other facilities required emergency state assistance to adequately meet the needs of residents.³⁹

The lack of access to adequate PPE, limited availability of testing, and severe staffing shortages put States, communities, and nursing homes at an immediate disadvantage in combating the initial and continued spread of COVID-19.

FINDINGS

Lack of Timely and Complete COVID-19 Case and Death Data for Nursing Homes

Finding: For over four months, the Trump Administration did not track cases of COVID-19 or deaths caused by the virus in nursing homes.

On January 3, 2020, the Trump Administration received formal notification of a new virus spreading in China.⁴⁰ By late February 2020, the first recorded outbreak attributed to COVID-19 began in a nursing home in Kirkland, Washington, resulting in at least 129 cases and 37 deaths.⁴¹ Over the following weeks and months, while COVID-19 rapidly spread throughout nursing homes across the country, the Trump Administration failed to track the number of COVID-19 cases and fatalities or disclose what little data it had regarding cases, outbreaks, and deaths caused by the virus. Families, first responders, and public health officials learned about COVID-19 infections through media reports and headlines.⁴²

On April 19, 2020, seven weeks after the outbreak in a nursing home in Washington State, and only after pressure from members of Congress, the press, and the public, CMS announced its intent to collect COVID-19 data in nursing homes.⁴³ The agency released a press statement that it would “require nursing homes to report cases of COVID-19 directly to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.”⁴⁴

CMS did not formally issue requirements for data collection until May 8, 2020.⁴⁵ Nursing homes were asked to begin reporting on May 17, 2020, but received a two-week grace period, meaning nursing homes would not be required to submit data until May 24, 2020. Even then, CMS stated that it did not intend to begin to enforce data submission requirements until nursing homes failed to meet the May 31, 2020 submission date, at which time it would begin issuing warning letters. Further, the CMS enforcement policy stated that it would not begin to assess CMPs against non-compliant facilities until the June 7, 2020 submission date had been missed, almost one month after the requirements were formally put in place.⁴⁶

Complicating matters, on May 31, 2020, CMS sent a letter to Governors disclosing a state-level summary of the first round of reporting collected through May 24, 2020.⁴⁷ It did not publicly post the underlying data until June 4, 2020.⁴⁸ The delay in ensuring that nursing homes reported the incidence of disease among residents and staff, and in releasing the resulting data, undermined public awareness of the scale of the threat that nursing homes faced.

Finding: The Trump Administration does not plan to count every COVID-19 case or death in nursing homes and has yet to collect urgently needed demographic information.

The Trump Administration is not requiring nursing homes to report suspected or confirmed cases or deaths that occurred prior to May 1, 2020.⁶⁸ This decision may result in the failure to account for at least 10,000 deaths—a figure determined based on public reporting of the number of deaths of residents and workers in long-term care settings, including nursing homes.⁶⁹ The Trump Administration has provided no legal citation or support for why they cannot require retroactive reporting, nor has the Administration announced any alternative efforts to collect this information from other existing sources beyond voluntary reports from nursing homes.

Nursing homes are required to keep accurate medical records for each patient, and most States require the spread of communicable disease to be reported to State and local health officials.⁷⁰ If data on suspected and known COVID-19 cases and deaths that took place prior to May 1, 2020 are not collected and released, it will impede efforts to implement necessary reforms. Although nursing homes may voluntarily report data from before May 1, it is not possible to distinguish from the public data which homes have done so or when these cases and deaths occurred, making this data largely unusable.

In addition, recent analyses have found that nursing homes with larger populations of minority residents and workers are more likely to experience a COVID-19 case or death.⁷¹ However, the extent to which different populations are impacted by the virus will never be entirely realized, as the Trump Administration is not currently collecting or reporting vital demographic data on race, ethnicity, or other characteristics, like age, gender, and disability status.⁷²

Finding: The Trump Administration's public data publication is not timely or accessible .

In the early months of the pandemic the Trump Administration did not consistently publish information about the spread of COVID-19 in nursing homes. CMS did not collect information from nursing homes until March 17, 2020 and did not make any information public until June 1, 2020. Similarly, CDC only conducted one review of the spread of COVID-19 in long-term care settings prior to May 6, 2020. According to CDC, through its systems for disease detection in States, the agency conducted a "snapshot" of the spread of COVID-19 in long-term care settings by asking States to provide information about the number of cases in those facilities for the weeks of March 16, 2020 and March 23, 2020.⁷³ Additionally, because this information was collected through a system that redacted individual and facility data, this snapshot did not provide any insight into which facilities experienced outbreaks or the extent of an outbreak, further hindering response efforts.

Since issuing its reporting requirements, CMS has indicated that the new COVID-19 data reporting system is integral to protecting residents, providing incidence information to families, communities, and the Trump Administration.⁷⁴ Despite its importance, the information reported by the Trump Administration has been delayed, error-ridden, and difficult for the public to access. Nursing homes are required to post data weekly. Nonetheless, publication of reported data continually lags behind facility reporting.⁷⁵

In addition, reports from across the country show that the information posted by CMS does not reflect data reported by nursing homes.⁷⁶ Since its initial release of data, the agency's publication of the information has presented an unclear picture of the spread of COVID-19 in nursing homes. For example, the agency released a fluctuating death count that first began at approximately 32,000 in its June 4, 2020 report, dropped to roughly 29,500 on June 18, 2020, and now reflects approximately 30,800 deaths.⁷⁷ Further, the Trump Administration has not updated Nursing Home Compare. On the Nursing Home Compare website, an individual webpage is dedicated to each facility. COVID-19 cases and deaths reported by the facility are not reflected on these individual webpages, which may make finding the information challenging.⁷⁸

Finding: The Trump Administration failed to implement a cohesive plan to ensure a steady supply of PPE to frontline workers across the United States, including workers at nursing homes.

The Trump Administration's early denial of the severity of the pandemic, its fragmented approach, and its inconsistent planning prevented States and facilities from protecting nursing home residents and workers. The Administration's response has been plagued with multiple shifts in leadership and changes in responsibility, undermining effective action. Inconsistent leadership on managing the supply chain for critical medical equipment has made it more difficult for communities to attain much-needed supplies. On January 29, 2020, President Trump announced the creation of a Coronavirus Task Force, initially led by Department of Health and Human Services Secretary Alex Azar, tasked with "leading the United States Government response to the novel 2019 coronavirus and with keeping [President Trump] apprised of developments."⁷⁹ On February 26, 2020, the President announced that Vice President Pence would be taking over leadership of the Task Force from Secretary Azar.⁸⁰ Subsequently, on March 19, 2020, Vice President Pence designated FEMA to lead the federal response in combating COVID-19.⁸¹

FEMA has since assumed responsibility for managing the PPE supply chain and ensuring that needed PPE is adequately disbursed.⁸² While FEMA initially distributed PPE to States from the federally managed Strategic National Stockpile, and has flown PPE into the United States for private distributors to deliver through their commercial networks under a program called "Project Airbridge," the agency has provided little visibility into these efforts, and only a limited set of supplies have reached the nursing homes that need it most.⁸³ President Trump has also complicated matters by asserting that each individual State, and not the federal government, has primary responsibility for procuring needed supplies.⁸⁴ In addition, according to some reports, the President's son-in-law, Jared Kushner, also prioritized contracts for certain supplies with "VIP" contractors and redirected supplies away from areas of greatest need.⁸⁵

The Trump Administration's failure to implement a cohesive plan to secure and distribute sufficient supplies of PPE to States and nursing homes in greatest need has endangered Americans, resulted in an increasing number of deaths, and contributed to the continued spread of COVID-19. The Trump Administration's failure to fully utilize the Defense Production Act (DPA) has also perpetuated significant PPE shortages in nursing homes. The DPA authorizes the President to prioritize, incentivize, and direct the manufacture and acquisition of critical materials necessary for national defense.⁸⁶ These authorities can be used to speed up the acquisition of a wide range of products including medical supplies, such as PPE and testing kits that have been in short supply.

One DPA authority allows the government to issue “rated orders,” which take precedence over all other orders for a supplier. On average, rated orders are utilized more than 300,000 times per year to help the federal government procure needed goods, such as resources used to house and feed survivors of a disaster and first responders, communications equipment and information technology, and other supplies to support logistics during recovery efforts.⁸⁷ DPA also provides financial incentives and assistance for United States industry to expand production capacity and supply, as well as antitrust protection through voluntary agreements for businesses to cooperate in planning and operations.⁸⁸

President Trump waited until March 18, 2020 to invoke the DPA, a delay that has hampered pandemic response efforts. Since issuing that order, the Trump Administration has not comprehensively used DPA authorities to resolve national supply chain issues.⁸⁹ FEMA Administrator Gaynor confirmed on June 9, 2020 that the Trump Administration had only used DPA authorities 15 times in response to COVID-19.⁹⁰ As a result, States and health care systems have been forced to procure needed supplies on their own, often in competition with each other. This competition has led to overpriced goods and an inefficient distribution of resources, with supplies going to the highest bidder instead of the areas in greatest need.⁹¹

Finding: Nursing homes received inadequate supplies and assistance securing protective equipment from the federal government.

The Trump Administration has not provided necessary assistance to nursing homes in securing the PPE needed to safely care for residents.¹¹¹ Further, FEMA failed to properly engage with disproportionately impacted communities or provide targeted solutions to challenges. Per its emergency response protocols, FEMA should have leveraged critical partners at the state, local, and tribal level to provide clear guidance on how to account for vulnerable populations in response actions.¹¹²

While federal requirements dictate that nursing homes maintain an adequate supply of PPE, even facilities meeting those requirements could not meet the demands required to keep workers and residents safe from COVID-19.¹¹³ Supply reserves have proven insufficient as use of PPE increases and the need for specialized PPE, like N95 respirators, outpaces what is generally needed during outbreaks of viruses, like seasonal flu, in nursing homes.¹¹⁴ According to nursing home representatives, regular suppliers do not consistently have certain types of critical PPE in stock, and even when PPE is available for purchase, prices reflect a significant markup in cost.¹¹⁵

On April 30, 2020, two months after the first outbreak of COVID-19 in a nursing home, the Trump Administration announced FEMA would begin to coordinate PPE supply shipments to individual nursing homes.¹¹⁶ Through a two-shipment initiative, called “Operation Commitment to Care,” FEMA is in the process of sending a 14-day supply of gloves, surgical masks, gowns, and eye protection to nursing homes across the United States.¹¹⁷ The initiative has been marked by errors and insufficient supplies to address the severe shortages faced by many nursing homes.

A three-state analysis of FEMA’s initial “Operation Commitment to Care” shipments, when cross-referenced with government databases of eligible nursing homes, shows that certain qualifying nursing homes were not included in the first lists of facilities set to receive supplies.¹¹⁸ Because these facilities were omitted from the initial distribution list, some did not receive their first direct shipment of PPE until June 2020—more than a month after the announcement of “Operation Commitment to Care,” and more than three months after the first COVID-19 outbreak in a nursing home.¹¹⁹

Shipment delays extended to facilities that were included in FEMA’s initial distribution list. Only five percent of the first tranche of supplies had been shipped within the first week of the effort, and the second supply shipment had not been completed at the time of the release of this report.¹²⁰ Additionally, some nursing homes reported that they had not received their first shipment over five weeks after the program was announced.¹²¹

In addition, concerns about unusable or inadequate supplies persist. According to one nursing home, some of the supplies from FEMA may have been in violation of the Trump Administration’s own standards for infection control.¹²² Other facilities received less than the quantity of supplies promised and some of the materials they received included “flimsy surgical masks or cloth face coverings that are explicitly not intended for medical use” and “large blue plastic ponchos” instead of medical gowns.¹²³ After being asked about the faulty supplies, a FEMA official conceded that some nursing homes received respirator masks that were “way expired” and “should have never gone out,” and that FEMA had “gone with a different gown” for the second tranche of shipments.¹²⁴ These inadequate shipments further inhibited many nursing homes from effectively responding to the pandemic.

	WEEK 24	On June 9 , FEMA confirms that the federal government has only used authorities under the DPA fifteen times in response to the pandemic. ¹⁴¹ On June 11 , nursing homes report that some of the protective gear they have received from FEMA is unusable and does not meet infection control requirements. ¹⁴²

Finding: FEMA did not use a standardized data set regarding COVID-19 cases or deaths in nursing homes to guide shipments of supplies to facilities.

FEMA did not target facilities that needed PPE shipments the most. The Trump Administration’s continued failure to collect reliable data on COVID-19 positive cases has prolonged this problem. While FEMA stated that the agency sent the first shipments from “Operation Commitment to Care” to facilities in certain metropolitan areas and “hotspots,” FEMA’s used a flawed method for determining these prioritization categories.¹⁴⁴

Rather than implementing a targeted and strategic approach to distribution, FEMA appears to have adopted a one-size-fits-all method for shipping and determining needed amounts of PPE. According to FEMA, under “Operation Commitment to Care” nursing homes would “receive an allotment of all four items [surgical masks, gloves, eye protection, and gowns] based on the medical staff size of the facility.”¹⁴⁵ However, facilities’ needs and access to supplies have differed greatly as the pandemic continues to spread throughout the United States. For example, facilities cohorting patients who are COVID-19 positive in specialized wings or units may have a greater need for eye protection and N95 respirators. Facilities in the midst of a widespread outbreak may have an urgent need for supplies in greater numbers than one that is not experiencing an outbreak. FEMA’s decision to base the amount of PPE a facility would receive on the number of workers alone missed an opportunity to target resources where they would have the greatest impact. Further analysis of FEMA documents regarding the shipments made under “Operation Commitment to Care” reveals that that a multitude of nursing homes with the same number of workers received differing amounts of PPE without explanation.¹⁴⁶

Nursing homes continue to express concerns about the availability of PPE. According to CMS data, as of June 14, 2020 over 1,800 facilities reported not having one week’s supply of N95 respirators and over 1,700 facilities reported not having one week’s supply of gowns.¹⁴⁷

Finding: The Trump Administration prioritized nursing homes too late and distributed too little of the emergency funding provided by Congress to those facilities.

Congress allocated $100 billion in emergency funding in the CARES Act and an additional $75 billion in the Paycheck Protection Program and Health Care Enhancement Act to help address the needs of health care providers on the front lines of the COVID-19 pandemic response.¹⁴⁸ The Trump Administration released the first of these funds with a general distribution on April 10, and a second on April 24, 2020 relying on a faulty methodology that failed to put urgently needed dollars into the hands of those providers most in need.¹⁴⁹ This methodology, which relied on a provider’s Medicare fee-for-service payments and net patient revenue, failed to fully account for the needs of health care providers solely or primarily reliant on Medicaid funding, including nursing homes and home and community-based providers who may have served nursing home residents.¹⁵⁰

Subsequent tranches of funding provided by the Trump Administration continued to de-prioritize nursing homes, despite mounting death tolls.¹⁵¹ On May 22, 2020, the Trump Administration provided only a fraction – a meager $4.9 billion – of the $175 billion in total funding to Medicare-certified nursing homes.¹⁵² These funds again failed to fully account for the needs of those facilities largely reliant on Medicaid funding and left out completely non-Medicare-enrolled nursing homes that serve Medicaid beneficiaries.¹⁵³ On June 9, 2020, nearly 11 weeks since passage of the CARES Act, the Trump Administration finally made a targeted disbursement of $15 billion to non-Medicare enrolled, Medicaid-only providers that did not receive distributions in the first or second rounds of general fund allocations.¹⁵⁴

No National Testing Strategy

Finding: The Trump Administration recommended regular testing of nursing home residents without providing a plan or the resources required to implement this recommendation.

The Trump Administration failed to implement widespread testing quickly and consistently at the beginning of the pandemic, ramp up testing capacity as the virus spread, and implement an effective national testing strategy. These failures have left seniors, people with disabilities, and workers in nursing homes across the country unprotected while living and working in close proximity to one another.

Diagnostic testing is an integral part of understanding and combating the spread of COVID-19. Over the course of the pandemic, the Trump Administration has struggled to increase diagnostic testing.¹⁵⁵ Critical materials such as swabs, transport media, and reagents have been in short supply due to increased global demand, and it is a lack of these materials, not laboratory capacity, that is frequently cited as the limiting factor when it comes to increasing testing.¹⁵⁶ In the absence of federal leadership on testing, shortages of testing materials and competition among jurisdictions in need have made it challenging for States to increase testing so they can reopen safely.¹⁵⁷

On April 27, 2020, the Trump Administration released a testing blueprint for “Opening Up America Again,” which outlined the various roles that it expects the federal government, the States, and the private sector to play in executing diagnostic testing for COVID-19.¹⁵⁸ The blueprint fails to acknowledge the challenges that States and health systems face in the procurement and distribution of testing supplies. The document asserts that the federal government will provide strategic direction and guidance to States and the private sector, but it also declares that it will only serve as the “supplier of last resort” for testing materials. In this plan, States are left to procure their own supplies and overcome testing barriers.¹⁵⁹

On May 18, 2020, the Trump Administration released specific guidance for nursing homes on how to reopen in phases. Among other suggestions, the guidelines recommend that through each phase of reopening, all nursing home workers should be tested weekly and any residents that are symptomatic or have contact with confirmed cases should also be tested.¹⁶⁰ Despite recommending increased testing, the guidance is silent on how facilities should procure additional tests or how the federal government will help facilities increase testing capacity. States attempting to institute the nursing home testing guidance have been thwarted by the lack of supplies and by the failure of the Trump Administration to fulfill state allocations.¹⁶¹

Additionally, the Trump Administration’s “COVID-19 Strategic Testing Plan,” which was required under the Paycheck Protection Program and Health Care Enhancement Act, fell short of providing a framework that would allow States and facilities to access the testing they need.¹⁶² Although the plan contains some needed information on testing targets, it lacks specifics on how the federal government will ramp up testing production, ensure access to needed amounts of testing supplies for States, or address disparities in communities impacted by the pandemic, as mandated by the law.¹⁶³ These shortcomings make it more challenging for States and nursing homes to ensure they have access to needed testing.

Late and Lacking Oversight

Finding: The Trump Administration delayed funding and detailed guidance for States on new oversight measures.

Regular surveying and inspections, conducted through a federal-state partnership, are the backbone of our country's nursing home oversight and enforcement system.¹⁶⁴ In addition to regular surveying, the inspection process includes follow-up visits, which determine whether deficiencies are corrected, and complaint surveys, which respond to specific grievances. The federal government, through CMS, issues nursing home regulations and guidance on surveying and enforcement processes, while States carry out the inspection process through State Survey Agencies.

On March 4, 2020, CMS announced that it would suspend regular surveying activities, which evaluate health and well-being, safety, and emergency preparedness, and instead would direct States to prioritize infection control inspections, immediate jeopardy complaints—instances involving significant harm to residents—allegations of abuse and neglect, and complaints regarding infection control.¹⁶⁵ While this change in the survey process took place on March 4, CMS did not release guidance to States on how to prioritize and conduct these new inspections until March 23.¹⁶⁶

Further, this guidance lacked any information or prioritization for ongoing oversight of nursing homes with a persistent record of poor performance.¹⁶⁷ Specifically, CMS' early guidance was silent on those facilities that qualify for or participate in the Special Focus Facility Program, an initiative mandated under federal law to focus on the nursing homes that consistently fail to provide care that meets federal standards.¹⁶⁸ CMS' scant prioritization scheme ignored the cumulative record of the Nation's poorest performing nursing homes.

Early in the pandemic, through the CARES Act enacted on March 27, 2020, Congress acted to enhance survey and certification activities in nursing homes.¹⁶⁹ The CARES Act provided CMS and States with $100 million to increase surveying and inspections of nursing homes affected by COVID-19.¹⁷⁰ Despite the urgent need for enhanced oversight and continued calls for additional federal funding and support from States, the Trump Administration did not acknowledge the availability of these funds until April 30, 2020, when it announced its intention to provide $81 million to the States.¹⁷¹ However, the Trump Administration did not announce its actual spending plans and conditions the States needed to meet until June 1, 2020.¹⁷²

Only as part of this funding announcement did CMS convey its plans to ensure that all nursing homes were subject to enhanced oversight or enforcement on infection control procedures pivotal to limiting the spread of COVID-19.¹⁷³ By waiting almost three months after releasing initial guidance on reprioritizing infection control surveys to announce the requirement that 100 percent of facilities must be surveyed by July 31 or risk losing a portion of the 2021 CARES Act funds, CMS delayed crucial oversight of nursing homes.

CONCLUSION

Facing significant failures at the federal level, States, localities, and nursing homes have endeavored to take action. With virtually no detailed guidance or notable benchmarks, States have managed to develop procedures to help guide nursing homes on how to mitigate spread, including “cohorting” residents based on COVID-19 status, employing “surge” or “strike” teams to address workforce shortages, and providing nursing homes with urgently needed technical assistance and support.¹⁹³

Cohorting, a practice recommended by CMS and CDC, involves separating COVID-19 positive patients in specialized areas or facilities to prevent cross-contamination with patients who do not have the virus. This practice requires significant resources to increase testing and staffing, supply workers with needed PPE, and outfit facilities with necessary supplies and equipment.¹⁹⁴ While cohorting was explored as early as March 2020 in Massachusetts, and CMS encouraged the strategy on April 2, the agency did not speak to best practices or any methodologies for successfully implementing this approach.¹⁹⁵ Further, CMS failed to identify or address resource challenges that States and localities may be facing as they try to implement this practice.¹⁹⁶

Similarly, to address infection control problems and workforce shortages in nursing homes, several States have created “surge” or “strike” teams consisting of doctors, nurses, certified nursing assistants, and other essential workers to rapidly intervene in nursing homes experiencing an outbreak and mitigate and contain the spread of the virus.¹⁹⁷ While these teams have been used to support testing and provide other assistance in many States, CMS has not produced guidance for States on best practices or how to leverage federal resources to ensure that these teams are successful.¹⁹⁸

Finally, while many nursing homes have struggled with infection control deficiencies and other issues that might impede their ability to slow the spread of COVID-19, CMS has not released guidance on how States or associations can implement technical assistance, education, or training to address these challenges.¹⁹⁹ On June 1, 2020, nearly six months after the Trump Administration received formal notification of the new virus from China, and a full three months since the first COVID-19 outbreak in a nursing home in the United States, CMS finally announced that Quality Improvement Organizations, the federal entities tasked with health care quality improvement, would refocus training and education efforts on nursing homes to assist with infection prevention and control procedures.²⁰⁰

No facility, no county, and no state has been left unscarred by COVID-19. The problems identified in this report require action to remedy the Trump Administration's failure to adequately plan for and protect seniors, people with disabilities, and the heroes on the front lines of this pandemic. These solutions, detailed below in the form of recommendations, address the need to track cases and collect basic data, secure needed supplies of PPE, implement an effective national testing strategy, and provide timely and adequate oversight.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The following recommendations are intended to better protect the more than 1.3 million Americans living in nursing homes and the nursing home workers who care for them. The Trump Administration's flawed and delayed response to COVID-19 must be replaced by a national action plan to save lives and combat continued spread. This national action plan must:

- Ensure adequate data collection. As demonstrated by this report, one of the earliest missteps in the response to COVID-19 in nursing homes involved the federal government's failure to collect and disclose data. Adequate reporting on all COVID-19 cases and deaths as well as supplies (including PPE, testing, staffing and more) is essential to the promotion of a targeted response and the dissemination of vital resources. Data should be collected from before May 1, 2020 to determine the COVID-19 cases and deaths dating back to the first outbreak, as should demographic data, including on gender, race, ethnicity, age, and disability status.
- Support States and nursing homes. States, communities, and nursing homes were unprepared for a pandemic of this scale, lacking emergency resources to acquire testing supplies, compete in the market for overpriced PPE, provide premium pay to workers, cover the unexpected cost of childcare, and to retrofit specialized wings or entire nursing homes to care for people with COVID-19. Congress should provide adequate funding to States and nursing homes to combat the virus and ensure that residents, families, nursing home operators, home and community-based providers, and other experts and providers are consulted on prevention and ongoing response efforts.

- Provide urgently needed PPE and testing. The effective implementation of promising strategies, including cohorting and the use of surge teams, cannot be accomplished without sufficient access to essential supplies, including PPE and testing. Nursing home workers require PPE to keep themselves and residents safe, and nursing homes require testing to track and monitor instances of the virus within their facilities, as do State Survey personnel and Long-Term Care Ombudsman programs. Notably, the provision of these essentials is contingent on availability of adequate funding and a coordinated national strategy. This strategy must be led by the federal government, as should the acquisition and distribution of PPE and testing supplies. Such a strategy must be based on the availability of complete and accurate data about pressing needs and shortages.
- Invest in home and community-based services. A thoughtful strategy to protect nursing home residents and workers must include a meaningful investment to promote access to home and community-based services provided under Medicaid. As demonstrated in this report, nursing homes and other congregate settings are particularly vulnerable to deadly COVID-19 outbreaks, making access to long-term services and supports in the home critical. An essential component of keeping seniors and people with disabilities safe from the virus involves helping individuals avoid care delivery in congregate settings when home and community-based care is desired and appropriate. Notably, this investment must include adequate supports for the home and community-based workforce and direct support professionals, including access to training and education, premium and overtime pay, and essential benefits, like paid sick leave and paid family and medical leave.
- Facilitate promising strategies. As noted above, in the absence of sufficient guidance from the federal government, States identified innovative and promising methods to limit the spread of COVID-19 in nursing homes and save lives. As States and communities engage in various phases of reopening, States should facilitate, and nursing homes should implement, cohorting strategies based on COVID-19 status, both within nursing facilities and through the use of non-traditional settings, like hotels or dormitories, where appropriate. These strategies must take into account the adequacy of a nursing home's workforce, as well as its demonstrated history of infection control and quality of care. They must also ensure that unnecessary or inappropriate transfers or discharges do not occur and that the rights of residents are protected. Additionally, States must have the resources to quickly deploy surge teams as workforce shortages emerge alongside COVID-19 outbreaks and to provide ongoing technical assistance with essential infection prevention and control protocols, like hand hygiene and cleaning procedures.
- Elevate the workforce. Seniors and people with disabilities living in nursing homes will never be safe from COVID-19 if the nursing home workforce is not provided the supplies and support they need to provide care under difficult conditions. Providing workers with adequate pay and ensuring they receive essential benefits is fundamental to preventing the continued spread of COVID-19 in nursing homes. These heroes on the front lines should receive premium pay, paid sick leave and paid family and medical leave, access to child care, and temporary housing as the need for quarantine arises. Senators Peters, Casey, and Wyden unveiled the “Heroes Fund,” alongside their Democratic colleagues, to provide such premium pay to essential workers, including nursing home workers.²⁰¹ Further, in spirit of the G.I. bill passed after WWII, our Nation owes health care workers and first responders meaningful payment towards education and training, loan forgiveness, or other needs in acknowledgement of their service to our most vulnerable citizens.

- Support pandemic mitigation efforts. During and after this pandemic, FEMA must consider how to support mitigation efforts for health emergencies, such as pandemics, when managing grant programs. Just as certain nursing homes can apply for grants to install backup generators and stormproof windows, FEMA grant programs should provide eligible facilities with assistance to implement mitigation strategies for potential future pandemics. This funding could support actions including the purchasing of PPE, hiring infection preventionists, and acquiring resources necessary for cohorting.
- Improve emergency management and infection control in nursing homes. The disproportionate impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on nursing homes, along with the impact of previous emergencies, demonstrates the need for emergency management and response reforms, including increased emphasis on prevention for infectious diseases. FEMA, along with its state counterparts, should conduct a comprehensive review of their emergency management and response requirements and programs and how they interact with nursing homes to better address needs. CMS should also review existing emergency preparedness standards, as well as the enforcement associated with any requirements, to ensure nursing homes are better prepared in the future. Additionally, the widespread nature of infection control deficiencies in nursing homes, and the high number of infections transmitted in these facilities each year, illustrates the need for an updating of these standards.²⁰² CMS should review infection control requirements, as well as the enforcement of these standards, to determine whether changes are needed to adequately protect residents.
- Anticipate and mitigate need. As demonstrated by the current pandemic, our Nation’s emergency management apparatus has not demonstrated the ability to activate the protocols and expand the capacity needed to quickly understand the effects of a disaster on a community, project its impacts, and model potential outcomes to best anticipate need. The federal government must demonstrate that it is using data-driven decision making for COVID-19 response and is better prepared for future public health crises, to mitigate potential harms to vulnerable populations, like nursing home residents and workers, moving forward.
